6. PTP members worked at those sites where civilian miners did not want to work, since the work was either unrewarding or dangerous. Soldiers had to achieve certain output targets; if they failed to achieve 100% results, they lost their wages and received only army pay. Permits to leave the camp were issued only to those who proved active in political activities and who fulfilled the production target at least 100%. Leaves were issued only when death occurred in the family.
